Faculty:

The Cochin campus has a small but immensely experienced faculty of around 30 visiting professors, most of them bringing with them a rich academic expertise in their specialised fields while many come from a true blue corporate background - sharing with students real life situations confronted on a day to day basis. Case studies and research papers form the core of academic delivery at IIPM, which help the students know the latest trends in a particular discipline. Faculty members also engage in creating academic literature in the form of articles and research papers - occasionally helped by the students in the research process. This also provides a great learning experience for the students. The internal permanent faculty members take up some of the core IIPM courses like Executive Communication and National Economic Planning, both of which are of great significance in creating a world class personality and a global perspective in the students.

Considered as the Gateway to Kerala - the God's Own Country, Cochin is strategically located on the south-western tip of the country. A city, which has been used as a port-city for ages, was identified as yet another fresh destination for IIPM in 2009. The Cochin campus has been set up on the popular M G Road in the central business district of the city in close proximity to various corporate and government establishments. The IIPM Cochin campus carries on the IIPM legacy in this part of the country by committing itself to impart world class education to its students from a campus, which is equally world class. The campus has already seen visits by international professors as a part of IIPM's GOP lecture series and would soon turn out to be an epicentre for quality higher learning in this part of the country.
